

Turned around at her desk, Anna Pollock shares a laugh with a classmate.

In our studies, we were. . .

Class

Acts

Biology, Calculus, Typing, Economics, History, English!!! So much to learn!! In the months we spent in our hallowed halls, we took it all in.

When we first returned to school after a long, lazy summer, it was hard for us to get our brains back into learning. After we settled into our new clothes, tight shoes, and shiny new desks, our teachers began feeding us on a broad new feast of knowledge.

Most of us met our academic challenges with enthusiasm. We worked hard to get the best grades that we could. But then there were the Seniors. Yes, many of them were hit with the notorious disease of Senioritis. After the first few weeks, they settled into 'slackin''. Their assignments were handed in late, if at all. Thankfully, The Underclassmen and some Seniors did work in their classes and that work paid off. We maintained our reputation for excellence.

The education we received during the school year certainly gave us an edge on life. For the Seniors, it was a key to unlock their futures. For the Underclassmen, it was a ticket to another successful year of high school.
