

The National Honor Society

A candle drifts through the dark auditorium, eerily illuminating the face of a red-robed person. The light stops and a tap is felt on the shoulder of an unsuspecting soul. He stands, is given his own candle, and is led to the stage. There he is draped in a red robe, given a rose, and seated with other nervous inductees. They have been chosen to join the National Honor Society.

The Odessa-Montour Chapter of the National Honor Society, the Sapients, followed the tradition of the National Organization in acting as a community service group. Members were chosen on the basis of their academic achievement, attitudes towards education, and leadership. Among their activities were collecting food for the Schuyler County Office Social Ministries at Thanksgiving, ringing bells for the Salvation Army at Christmastime, and providing tutors for the athletes.

The National Honor Society was a prestigious organization to which its members could be proud to belong.
